Motivation

ABB has shown true leadership in driving sustainable industrial transformation in China, setting a gold standard for responsible business practices and technological innovation.

With a long-standing presence in China, ABB has incorporated a holistic approach to sustainability, integrating energy-efficient solutions, automation, and digitalization into sectors crucial to China's green transition. The company's initiatives align with China's dual carbon goals, supporting both emissions reduction and clean energy growth.

ABB also plays a leading role in community engagement and talent development, actively partnering with local universities and research institutes to cultivate the next generation of engineers and innovators. This local commitment, combined with its global expertise, strengthens Swedish industry's reputation in China as a partner in innovation and sustainable growth.

Moreover, ABB's deep investments in R&D, electrification, and digital solutions continue to elevate its position as a global technology leader with strong roots in the Swedish industrial heritage.

ABB indeed exemplifies the values and aspirations of Sweden and SwedCham in China through its long-term commitment to innovation, sustainability, and responsible leadership.
